You should carefully consider whether trading is appropriate for you based on your experience, your objectives, your financial situation and other relevant circumstances.

Past performance gives no indication of future results.

We wish to point out to you some specific risks below that may result from trading with financial instruments.

RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH ELECTRONIC TRADING

Before you begin carrying out transactions with an electronic system, you should carefully review the rules and provisions of the exchange(s) offering the system, or of the financial instruments listed that you intend to trade, as well as your broker's conditions. Online trading has inherent risks due to system responses/reaction times and access times that may vary due to market conditions, system performance and other factors, and on which you have no influence. You should be aware of these additional risks in electronic trading before you carry out these transactions as BFX Standard does not control them or have any influence on them.

RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH TRADING

Trading in ANY market entails high risk and is not suitable for all people. Past performance is not an indication of future results. In this case, as well, the high degree of volatility can act both against you and for you. Before you decide to trade, you should carefully assess your investment objectives, experience, financial possibilities and willingness to take risks. There is a possibility that you will lose your initial investment partially or completely. Therefore, you should not invest any funds that you cannot afford to completely lose in a worst-case scenario. You should also be aware of all the risks associated with exchange trading and contact an independent financial advisor in case of doubt.
